Special Information

PRICES named in this catalog cover packing and delivery charges to your door or nearest express office and are the lowest possible to be consistent with good quality. Sturdy single rhizomes will be furnished and most of them will bloom the first season planted.

SHIPMENTS Where no instructions accompany order as to method of shipping, they will be sent by express or parcel post (insured) as seems most advisable.

ORDERS You will want your Iris just as early as they are in proper condition to ship and as stock of the rarest varieties is very limited, it is to your advantage to forward your order early. The best time for transplanting Irises is after they are through flowering in July or August. Every variety is separately marked with a copper wired label and our careful method of packing insures plants reaching destination in good condition.

GUARANTEE Every variety is guaranteed absolutely true to name, and we exercise the greatest care in getting them out. All shipments are freshly dug and guaranteed to arrive in a satisfactory condition. Substitutions are made only by permission or request.

TERMS Cash must accompany orders, remittances to be made by post-office money orders, drafts or express money orders; currency can usually be sent with safety, although there is some risk in so doing. C. O. D. shipments cannot be made unless accompanied by at least one-half the amount in cash.

IRIS

The Iris is a magnificent and most satisfactory hardy perennial as it requires no special care and will grow in practically any soil; it will withstand extreme heat or cold and drought. It will flower over a long period of time, multiply rapidly and the first cost is nominal. Such a combination of virtues is difficult to surpass.

The modern Irises are the aristocrats of the "Flag" family, but many people do not realize the remarkable development and improvement that has been made in recent years. Their possibilities in landscape effects are far-reaching so each season their popularity increases. By careful selection of varieties you may have blooms from the first warm days of early spring until mid-summer.

We have a very complete and interesting collection of the finest varieties in cultivation, having discarded many that are now in commerce, retaining those of superior quality and the choice new productions. Our descriptions are brief without any superlative praise and wherever it is known, we give the name of the originator and date of introduction. The figures preceeding the names of the varieties denote the value rating according to the American Iris Society. Valuation was on a scale of ten, which represented perfection and was arrived at by the votes of jurors appointed by the society. These jurors were located in different sections of the country so that each variety was given a thorough test. In some cases the variety has not been voted upon and there is no rating.

Every Iris planter and fancier is urged to join this Society as the yearly bulletins issued are of inestimable value. The annual membership fee is only $3.00 and can be sent to us direct. We will be very glad to forward your name and dues to the proper authorities.

PLANTING AND CULTURE

A dry sunny situation will produce the best Iris but they will thrive in any good garden soil, that is well drained.

Plant very shallow, so the top of the rhizome is just below the surface of the ground. It is wise to cover them with a light mulch the first winter to prevent them heaving out by the frequent freezes and thaws. Water once when planting to firm the soil around the rhizome. A light application of lime added each year will prove very beneficial and when the soil needs fertilizer, a dressing of bone meal is sufficient. Avoid manure and over-watering.

The best time for planting Irises is after they are through flowering in July or August; this enables the plants to make sufficient root growth before winter comes and insures blooming the first year. To get best results, the roots should be dug and divided every three or four years.

Abbreviations used; S. means standard; F. means falls.

TALL BEARDED IRIS

Late May and June Flowering

Their beauty outrivals that of the Orchids in their delicacy of structure and wide range of colors. No garden is complete without them and a very delightful garden can be made with nothing but them, as they are especially adapted for flower borders, shrubberies, woodland walks and for surrounding lakes and ponds, if planted well above the water level.

They are well named Fleur-de-Lis, for they are as colorful as the rainbow, seeming to reflect the sky and the sunshine.

JAPANESE IRIS (Kaempferi)

The magnificence of Japanese Irises is indescribable on account of their large size and rich coloring. A mass of them in bloom is a most gorgeous sight as their striking beauty and strange flowers can never be forgotten. The single varieties have three large spreading petals, the double varieties six. They begin to bloom as the other Irises are finishing, about June 25th to July 1st and in some sections continue until the first of August.

It is impossible to get varieties true to name from Japan, as unfortunately the nurserymen there send out nothing but mixtures, but those we offer have been described and trued up from flowers in our own planting and may be relied on as perfectly accurate.

The secret of successfully growing Japanese Iris is to keep the ground well stirred, never allowing it to bake. They will thrive in any good garden soil but to produce the very large flowers, should be watered copiously in May and June. Water should never be allowed to stand over the plants for any length of time, especially in winter or it will prove fatal to them.

The latter part of July or August is the best time to set them out and late plantings should be protected by a light mulch to prevent roots heaving out of the ground.

The offers we make on these peonies is a splendid opportunity to start your peony garden with some of the rare and choice sorts at a price almost irresistible.

Peonies are delightful companions for Irises; their dense foliage alone makes a charming background and their wonderful abundance of gorgeous and gay colored flowers blend so beautifully with the colors in the Irises, that each enhances the beauty of the other.

Both are so hardy, so easy to grow, so sure to bloom, so ready to respond eagerly to any little care and attention, that a lover of one must necessarily have or develop a fondness for the other.

We have been fortunate in propagating a good quantity of the fine sorts offered on pages 23 and 24 so are able to furnish them at reasonable and attractive prices. We are particularly anxious for every garden owner to possess all of them.

Good strong healthy divisions that will give you satisfactory results will be sent. Stock must please you or we cannot hope to have you on our regular customer list, and we aim to give you such quality and service as to make you a permanent and entirely satisfied customer.

In these assortments have been included some of the exquisite Single and Japanese types, which have grown so in popularity, and without at least a few of these, no garden is complete.
